Summary of Impact

Food for Your Heart
The Joanna Foundation 2023

The Joanna Foundation grant made a significant impact on the success of our Food for Your Heart program in Newberry, South Carolina. Through this support, Latino Community Development, in partnership with Harvest Hope Food Bank, FarmaSis, Senn Brothers, and Love Thy Neighbor, was able to distribute more than 9,000 pounds of fresh produce and essential food goods to families experiencing food insecurity.

The distribution exceeded our original goal of serving 400 individuals and families, ultimately reaching more than 500 community members. Food bags included nutritious items such as oranges, beets, bell peppers, broccoli, butternut squash, cabbage, collard greens, sweet potatoes, yams, canned goods, bread, meat, and other staple items that helped families access healthier food options.

The event also demonstrated strong community collaboration and volunteer engagement. Local partners worked together to package and distribute food, and the district Councilwoman volunteered throughout the entirety of the event in support of the community effort.

The Joanna Foundation's funding directly supported the purchase, transportation, packaging, and distribution of food and materials, making it possible for us to provide culturally appropriate, nutritious resources to low-income Latino families and other families of color in Newberry. This program not only helped alleviate immediate food insecurity, but also promoted healthier lifestyles and provided financial relief to households facing difficult choices between food, housing, utilities, and medical expenses.

While we have included several photos, the overwhelming turnout and constant activity throughout the event made it challenging to fully document the day, as our team and volunteers remained focused on serving the community.

We are deeply grateful to The Joanna Foundation for helping make this impactful day possible and for supporting our mission to improve health, wellness, and food access in underserved communities.
